the various parts of the country differed from one another in many ways while retaining certain characteristics throughout.

The handicrafts shown are examples of their astonishing native cleverness in adapting the materials at hand to their general use.

In the Exhibit of the Work of the Eskimos attention might be directed to the numerous examples of their cleverness in carving and manufacturing of articles from ivory to meet their needs and fancies. Among the many interesting objects are an Eskimo kayak (or canoe) made from sealskin with the hair removed, stretched when green [illegible] parts covered by the Mackenzie River Indians, and [illegible] Indian drum made of cedar wood in the form of a large box. This drum was beaten with the fist and is believed to have been the last drum of its kind at Hells Gate.
